Secure Collaboration for Seamless Productivity

In today's on demand world the level of complexity around securing your organisation has reached new heights. As you open boundaries to work closer with customers, suppliers and partners the complications around the end-user lifecycle increase.

Every new opportunity brings with it a new boundary, a boundary which can only be crossed through access policies and user provisioning. With multiple identities drawing from disparate sources, both inside and out of the organisation, the challenge of retaining control and ensuring integrity increases.

With every new application and partner organisation a new identity is created;

- each new identity rarely integrates with existing identities - leading to additional costs and complexity;
- each new identity adds risk to compliance with business, regulatory, legal and security requirements.

Trust is a key issue as you build new applications and networks with partner organisations. A lack of trust results in replicated account information with costly / inefficient account management. This 'traditional' security model introduces new security exposures and risks around legislative compliance and privacy management.

IBM Tivoli Federated Identity Manager provides the first holistic identity solution for the swift, secure share of information with partners and providers. Rather than replicating the same administrative information across partners, Federated Identity Manager enables the formation and administration of a single identity per user - across enterprise boundaries.

What Can Federated Identity Manager Do For My Business?

By reducing administrative cost and the obstacles between information and knowledge, IBM Tivoli's Federated Identity Manager is essential to organisations focused on productivity through strategic knowledge sharing - enable secure business communications across organisational units, customers and partners - delivering seamless collaboration while expanding business opportunity.
